CELEBRATE them.

Let your students know what a remarkable thing they’ve done.

There are two categories of awards, in the form of pins and their certificates, at the elementary, middle, and high school levels: The President’s Award for Educational Excellence and The President’s Award for Educational Achievement. The criteria for both is rigorous. Students who receive either of these awards know they’ve achieved something extraordinary.

“My mom and I cried when I won the award. This is an accomplishment we will both always remember and it brought us closer together. I don't want her to cry again but I'm trying for another one!”

MOTIVATE them.

Create the defining moment in a child's life.

As a principal, you aspire to make a difference in the accomplishments and success of your students. Through the President's Education Awards Program, you have the opportunity to be the catalyst that sets them on an upward path. These prestigious awards provide individual recognition from the President and the U.S. Secretary of Education for both student achievement and hard work.

Unlike other awards programs, the principal plays a leading role and has sole discretion in choosing recipients. Reward them, and you can encourage your students to set high goals and meet the challenges of reaching beyond their limits. Teach them the value of persistence. And perhaps, inspire a lifelong passion for learning.

REWARD them.

The President's Award for Educational Excellence.

This award recognizes academic success in the classroom. To be eligible, students must meet requirements including grade point average, school-set criteria and choice of state tests or teacher recommendations. For a complete list of criteria, visit peap-aca.org.

HONOR them.

The President's Award for Educational Achievement.

This award recognizes students that show outstanding educational growth, improvement, commitment or intellectual development in their academic subjects but do not meet the criteria for the Educational Excellence Award.

Its purpose is to encourage and reward students who give their best effort, often in the face of special obstacles. Criteria for this award is developed at each school. To see criteria examples, go to peap-aca.org.
